A rally, organized by Students for Academic Freedom and for International understanding (SFAFI), took place at a mosque in Surat to protest the lynching of a man in New Delhi, who was accused of killing a woman in Delhi. While speaking to The Hindu, Mukesh Kumar, President, SFAFI, said that the rally was meant to express the feelings of the public. “We believe that we should take action against people who commit crimes, whether they be Hindu or Muslim or Christian or Sikh. But, you cannot execute people based on rumors alone. This was the stance of this rally,” he said. Also read: ‘Not the first, nor the last’: Are lynching protests turning deadly ‘No one except the court can decide a case’ The Muslim community has reportedly claimed that they were not able to prove the existence of the alleged cow slaughter. This was stated by Manoj Kumar, the President of Delhi Cow Protection Society. “Muslims have no right to defend themselves, they have no right to take law into their hands and lynch people. This was a lynching and this is not something that Hindus should do,” said Zulfikar Murshed, a local priest. When asked about the cows that were seen at the rally, he said that the Muslims also faced humiliation due to the same. “We saw cows being brought into mosques during Ramzan,” he added. ‘It’s not a Hindu or Muslim issue’ Addressing the media, Mukesh Kumar said that the rally was not targeted towards any community. “This rally was to condemn all such acts. There are elements who may see it as a sectarian issue, but it is not, it is a social issue,” he said. “A small section of Hindus can’t be blamed for the actions of another group, so we should not throw the same mud,◆ 82157476af
